To whom it may concern:

“Peter Johnson is a champion!” ...that is how he was proudly introduced to me when visiting South Central College where I was seeking an IT specialist to help develop a platform, design curriculum and deliver a 21st Century Teaching and Learning training program for the Higher Education Institutions in El Salvador. Peter’s expertise spanned every aspect of what I needed to put together an effective team to create a Train the Trainer program.

During our months of working together, Peter’s expertise in technology and instructional design were indispensable for us to meet and fulfill the project goals. As a team, we were challenged to create a training program to reach 700 faculty teaching in disciplines serving four key sectors in the country. The teaching material needed to combine long distance learning and face to face learning that both taught and practiced 21st Century teaching methods that also incorporated applied learning in an industry context.

Peter’s remarkable facility with technology, instructional design, and developing interactive course materials was essential to our success. He contributed significantly to our process of creating a template of 28 modules, including learning objectives tied to each module, that would help transform the teaching capacity of the faculty at 40 universities in El Salvador.

But there’s more! Peter goes above and beyond expectations in his graciousness and reliability; his insight and enthusiasm, and in the spirit of his collegiality. Peter is indeed a Champion and I look forward to working with him again!
